Imagine if all people in our community were valued and involved

· Visioning an Inclusive Community

ABCD defines assets as the wisdom, strengths, passions and gifts that each person has to contribute to community life.

“The concept behind ABCD is about having a look at the assets we have in our communities. We can break it down smaller than suburbs and look in our own streets.

There can be assets in terms of businesses or buildings or individuals.

Assets might be people who have time on their hands to have a chat. It might be retired people who have a skill and can be called up. Or there may be some space where people can talk to the council about creating a park...

We’ve all got so much to give, and it’s not necessarily about money.

Just people getting together and having a conversation can move mountains...”

Quote: Sharon James WA

Facilitator: Ted Smeaton

Ted has written developed and implemented Community Building ABCD projects throughout Australia and Asia and is a member of Jody Kretzmann and John McKnight’s Asset Based Community Development (ABCD) Institute, North Western University, USA.
